

Moore Honored For Bighorn Writings, Hunter's Horn story

From staff reports

Wildlife journalist and Houston Safari Club Foundation member Chester Moore has been honored for his writings.

He won first place for the "Outdoors Column " category in the Texas Outdoor Writers Association Excellence in Craft awards for his bighorn sheep story entitled "New Life For New Mexico's Bighorns". The story appeared at his blog "Higher Calling".

He also received a second place award in the "Feature" category for his "Desert Homecoming" story in Sports Afield that detailed the comeback of Texas' desert bighorn herd.

"I've been doing a lot on wild sheep, trying to get the word out on their conservation needs and the absolute triumph that hunter-based conservation has been for all wild sheep in North America. It's a real honor to be recognized for these writings."

He also received honorable mention in the "Feature" category for his "Hunting American Man-Killers" in The Houston Safari Club's "Hunter's Horn" magazine.

"I always enjoy writing about hogs and publishing in Hunter's Horn and that story focused on targeting lone, large boars which are the ones that statistically are responsible for most human fatalities. And with recent attacks in Texas, it was eerily perfect timing."

You can follow Chester's writings at highercalling.net